Eric Cavoli provided a detailed overview of the District's current re-branding project sharing background on the process, including stakeholder interviews and their approach to development of a mission, brand promise, and vision. The team shared creative work to date.

Chairman McCavanagh left the meeting.

A brief discussion followed. Director Mooney noted that the new proposed GHT logo would need to be phased in before the logo itself developed the identity. There was general agreement.

Director Fitzgerald noted that the approach, the evolution, and the brand architecture were "spot-on" and the colors were great. She noted that the "T" in GHT should be more evident. There was general agreement. She expressed concern about the change from ADA to OpenRoad or another name for the ADA service noting that the work ahead should focus on ensuring that the public could see a strong connection between a new name and the ADA service. There was general agreement. Holcomb noted that staff would also be discussing this with representatives from the CTDOT. It was agreed that the slide deck used for this presentation would be transmitted to all Board Members.

Director Mitchell noted that overall, he was pleased with the work and direction and would need additional time to consider all that was presented. He noted the importance of clarifying the distinction between CTTTransit and GHTD. He also agreed with the importance of ensuring the public clearly understands the ADA service provided by the District.

Director Rosario noted that in the past, she had experienced some confusion regarding the different services provided but overall liked the brand model presented. She noted that she originally liked the EnRoute name for the ADA service and also likes OpenRoad. Director Mooney noted that for a new name like OpenRoad to have recognition it would take some time and effort.

Director Tanguay noted that he agreed with the path of the effort and liked the colors and transit-like lines used in the preliminary logo. Deputy Director Bujeaud briefly commented on the process and staff's initial reaction to the work to date. Director Fitzgerald asked that the Board receive a follow-up presentation as the work nears completion. It was agreed that an additional presentation would be made at a regular meeting of the Board at a date to be determined.
